About This Game

The world is going crazy, people will improve their technology, not realizing how they spoil nature, cutting down trees, oblivious to the fact that the level of oxygen in the atmosphere decreases markedly. In the end, due to the lack of trees, people can not breathe. Villain raised in his back yard lots of trees, and began to sell oxygen in cans. One stubborn guy really wanted to know, where did all the plants and sent to the path of the robot, programmed for extraction of at least one grain of real wood.

gayish game... To be fair, you have to have a very high IQ to understand Super robolom. The humour is extremely subtle, and without a solid grasp of theoretical physics most of the jokes will go over a typical player's head. There's also Robolom's nihilistic outlook, which is deftly woven into his characterisation- his personal philosophy draws heavily from Narodnaya Volya literature, for instance. The fans understand this stuff; they have the intellectual capacity to truly appreciate the depths of these jokes, to realise that they're not just funny- they say something deep about LIFE. As a consequence people who dislike Super robolom truly ARE idiots- of course they wouldn't appreciate, for instance, the humour in Robolom's existential catchphrase 'Title screen music is too loud,' which itself is a cryptic reference to Turgenev's Russian epic Fathers and Sons. I'm smirking right now just imagining one of those addeleated simpletons scratching their heads in confusion as Dan Harmon's genius wit unfolds itself on their television screens. What fools.. how I pity them. \ud83d\ude02

And yes, by the way, i DO have a Super robolom tattoo. And no, you cannot see it. It's for the ladies' eyes only- and even then they have to demonstrate that they're within 5 IQ points of my own (preferably lower) beforehand. Nothin personnel kid \ud83d\ude0e
